This dog can swim circles around me

Posted on June 8, 2012

16

It's been one of those weeks... so I hope you'll understand that I didn't have time to put together your regularly scheduled Friday linkage. I'll make it up to you. I promise.

Until then, enjoy this video. Considering summer weather is here, it seemed pretty appropriate. I think it's impossible to watch it and not smile!

What are you up to this weekend?

#K9Kamp: Hold on a doggone minute

Posted on June 7, 2012

16

Wow... we just finished the third K9 Kamp challenge. How did that happen? I guess time does fly when you're having fun.

This week's challenge was called Just One Doggone Minute to Win It. This challenge recognizes that sometimes life gets in the way of staying fit. However, we all have some free minutes in there, so Kampers were encouraged to find a way to make those minutes count! Read on to find out how we did... Continue reading →

A dog in a hot car's just not right...

Posted on June 6, 2012

17

Today, we're going with some vintage Bella from 2007 combined with a PSA from the pup herself. (She totally wrote this song.)

Hot dog, summer in the city
Whether a Beagle, Yorkie, or a Pitty.
Why can't I just nap like a kitty?
It isn't getting any cooler in the city.

All around people being brain dead
Even though that car is hotter than a match head.

But it's not hard to be a pearl,
Be smart about the world.
Come on, come on, and see the light
A dog in a hot car's just not right.

And babe, don't you know it's a pity,
Some people just aren't all that bright
In the summer, in the city
In the country, or the city.

Stay cool, no need for that pity
Just remember this little ditty.
Sure enough, you'll be sitting pretty
Looking out for dogs in the country and the city.

I'm already filled with dread knowing that the usual hot car stories are just around the corner... as usual, I'm sure the news cycle will bring out my Hulk-ian tendencies. (As in, "Hulk smash idiots who leave their dogs in hot cars." Hulk smash a lot.)

You may remember when I shared a great post from Oh, Corbin – “You call me a Pit Bull like it’s a bad thing.” Using that post as inspiration, Corbin has organized a special event today – Blogville Pitty Post Day! The mission is simple – share a positive post about Pit Bulls.

The timing couldn’t be better for me, actually. This weekend, I had the pleasure of spending a few hours with a fantastic Pit Bull in need of a home, and I’m delighted to introduce her to you today. Continue reading →

Give me your ears, and I’ll lend you a paw...

Posted on June 1, 2012

10

As usual, it’s time for some Friday linkage. This week, the theme is helping out. Confused? Stick with me...

1. Your punny pet name: Corg Clooney. (You know, if George Clooney were a Corgi.)
2. Check out this post from Oh, Corbin announcing Blogville Pitty Post Day on Monday, June 4. We intend to participate – I hope you’ll join in!
3. Did you know that Be the Change for Animals (one of my personal blogging inspirations) had a birthday earlier this week? Head on over and wish the team a happy birthday! (There’s even a bit of personal news in there - I’ll be helping out as a staff writer. I can’t wait to get started!)
4. Because I’m addicted to blogging, I’ve also agreed to help out with the blog for City Dogs Rescue in DC. Here’s my first post!
5. Is it scattered that I’m helping with two different rescues? I think it’s kind of fun. I also help with the Friends of Homeless Animals (FOHA) Twitter account (which

you should totally follow), and participate in FOHA adoption events. Guess I took my own advice!

6. I’m actually attending a cool FOHA adoption event this weekend. It’s called Sit, Sip & Stay, and it’s at Bluemont Vineyard in Bluemont, VA. Attendees can taste wine while helping FOHA’s medical fund. Pretty neat, huh?
7. I totally think that all rescues should steal this calling card idea. Thanks to Pamela from Something Wagging This Way Comes for sharing this one with me. (Warning: ear worm within. No, not that kind of ear worm. I think that link should earn me some geek cred.)
8. Speaking of helping animals, here are thirty-five that could use your help.
9. The chance to help name an otter? On a website called You Otter Know? Obviously, I’m in. I’m pulling for Sam Otterston.
10. I guess we all find our own ways to help. This little girl has taken it upon herself to help her dog learn a very important life skill.

It’s not a one-way street, however. Dogs help us too. Like this dog helping his baby friend learn to crawl.

I kind of want a series featuring the adventures of this dog and baby as they grow up together. Rated TV-CAA (Cute, Awesome & Adorable).

#K9Kamp: Having a ball... with rope

Posted on May 31, 2012

29

It’s time for another K9 Kamp update. Today, we’re talking about the second challenge, which was named (drum roll, please)... Play with Your Balls.

(In case you're not as amused as I am – which would make me question our friendship – perhaps the fact that I received an email beginning with “How'd you all do playing with your balls?” yesterday will do the trick. Best email ever.)

Anyway, as you know, Bella and I have been battling against various health issues during this year's K9 Kamp. (We're still on the DL, but we're on the mend.) This week, we also had an additional challenge – the fact that Bella will not play with balls. I guess she doesn't get the joke.

Read on to find out how we did... Continue reading →

Caption this: Stairway to Bella

Posted on May 30, 2012

And she's making a stairway to Bella.

When you get there you know, that the stairs will be closed.

With a treat you can get to the next floor.

Ooh, you must pay to use the stairway to Bella.

I seriously can't help myself. The husband sent me this photo and it was just begging for a Led Zeppelin parody, don't you think?

Now, it's your turn. How would you caption this Bella?

I live in an Angry Birds game

Posted on May 28, 2012

32

We moved into this house in the winter of 2009. This marks the third spring we've spent here. The past two years were fairly uneventful. However, here in 2012, things have taken a puzzling turn. Before I get too far into it, I should warn you that this post is a long one. I promise I'll try to make it worth your while...

For some reason, the neighborhood birds have decided that my house is a problem that needs to be pecked out of existence. It's like living in a live-action version of Angry Birds. The siege began in April, when this little bird decided that the shiny plate on our front door was looking at him (or her) funny.

Adorable adoptables in northern Virginia: Back in black edition

Posted on May 27, 2012

Timber from FOHA

This week, I have a special edition of my Adorable Adoptables feature for you. In the month of May, Friends of Homeless Animals (FOHA) in northern Virginia has been running a "Back in Black" promotion to showcase black cats and dogs looking for a home. The promotion is part of the Best Friends Animal Society's Back in Black 2 national adoption event.

Oreo from FOHA

We've talked about black pets on the blog before as part of Adopt a Less Adoptable Pet Week. My motto is "appreciate, don't discriminate" – it's crazy that black pets have a tougher time getting adopted, considering how awesome they are. I mean, how could anyone find the sweet faces accompanying this post anything less than fantastic?

Gulliver from FOHA

So, check out some campaign info from FOHA. Then swing by the FOHA Twitter account and Facebook page, where they've been sharing black pets all month! There's even a special Black Cat Ball section on the FOHA website. It's a pretty great campaign, and there are lots of cute pets up for adoption, including the ones featured in this post – Timber, Oreo, and Gulliver. Finally, don't forget to spread the word about these sometimes overlooked (and amazingly awesome) adoptables!

Cat's all, folks...

Posted on May 25, 2012

14

Before we get into today's links, I have some fun news to share. I recently learned that this blog was nominated for eCollegeFinder's Top Pet Blogs Award. The winners were announced this week, and we made the list of the Top 107 Pet Blogs! (I don't know why it's 107, but I kind of dig it.) Pretty cool, huh? Even cooler, some of our blogging friends made the list too. Check out the winners here.

Now, to the linkage. Last week, I featured some otters. This week, I'm feline like featuring some cats. (I blame this list of strange cat facts I encountered a few days ago.) Let's get to it...

1. Your punny pet name for this week: Terrence Meoward.
2. Cheetah cub overload! You're welcome.
3. I have a feeling that Kristine from Rescued Insanity will like this next one. A cat trained to hug... could the video be any cuter? (On a related note, Kristine is working on an awesome project to show the world just how awesome cats can be. Swing by to find out more and submit your own story!)
4. The cats in this video give a new meaning to the term copycat.
5. By no means am I endorsing this brand (I'm no expert on cat food) – that being said, I have to admit that this ad made me laugh. For Pete's sake, it has Chris Parnell in it. I'm not immune to the charms of Dr. Spaceman.

Finally, I give you this week's video. I need to hire this guy to do the music for my punny production company. (I've got tons of characters, after all.) Wonder if he could do the same thing with plush dogs?

I know... it's a weird video, but it just felt right. I'm a weird gal.

What are you up to this weekend? Don't forget to check out Peggy's Pet Place and Kol's Notes for this week's K9 Kamp challenge. Also, you have until Tuesday to enter the two Happy Tails Spa giveaways I announced last week, so why not do it this weekend?

About Me

Diogenes Montesa Baena

Canada

As a bio-medical photographer, photography is my job. It is also my hobby, my excuse to go for a walk, a means for getting to know people and places, and a sort of medication, therapy for the soul. I am a generalist, applying the basics of photographic technique and composition to different disciplines: architecture, socio-documentary, events, and landscapes. The one area I do love to do, and I thrive on the pressure and excitement of it all, is wedding photography!! Please have a look at how I shoot weddings, and if you like my style and approach, shoot me an email: elementalview@gmail.com If you like my style and approach, I am also available for your photo projects!

About the product:

i dont know wether i picked the wrong thing or site wasnt clear,i wanted a poster for my 3 yearold grandson who loves sportbike stunts.I am very diappointed. So I spent over $20.00 for a 6in.x 5in. photo.wont buy again or reconmend this company again.

About the print:

print quailty was fine,but again I thought I was getting a poster for the money I was payin.

About the product:

Quality is good but the price is steep, especially once you add the shipping to it. I was not as pleased as I thought I would be. And it would be more helpful for the site to give better examples for sizing expectations as well, we were a bit surprised at the small-ness of our final order when received.

About the print:

It was satisfactory.

Wonderful print quality

by Alex (See all my reviews)

Arlington, VA, United States

6/6/2012

About the product:

This is my own photo so when I purchased this print I was really concerned at how true the print would be to my original image. Since I'm selling these prints to you but have NO input on the printing process myself I was very concerned about the quality of Zazzle's work.

About the print:

I chose to print this on the archival matte paper. I'm VERY impressed with both the quality of the paper as well as the quality of the print that zazzle has made. I printed several pictures on several formats and while I love the quality of each print I have to say that the premium canvas option is the most impressive. The Premium Canvas option is however incorrectly labeled as "matte". It actually has a gloss finish and it looks amazing! I usually shy away from gloss but in this case it works perfectly!

Amazing

by gwen r - ohio (See all my reviews)
5/21/2012

About the product:

I had taken this picture of my son and the lead singer from his favorite band who we went to see. He wanted the picture blown up to put in his room, so while I was shopping on Zazzle I say I could make posters and I did. He loves it, it is prominently displayed in his bedroom and he can relive the memory every day of meeting Jayy. The quality was fabulous, it took a minimal amount of time to get it delivered to me.

About the print:

The picture quality was great, no blurring of any sort.

Wisdom Owl Deck is a great gift...

by Jonaya (See all my reviews)

12/9/2011

About the product:

Bought this deck for a good friend for her birthday. She loves it! She's excited to pick out her own trucks, wheels, and bearings! Looking forward to seeing her ride the Wisdom Owl around town!

About the print:

Printing was great. The guys at the skate shop I bought grip tape from said the graphic was awesome. It's not screen printed. It's basically a graphic skin. Wasn't necessarily sure I knew that before I bought the board but I was still satisfied with the quality.

Perfect Clinical Instructor Gift!

by DreamInPurple (See all my reviews)
5/17/2012

About the product:

This was the perfect gift for our clinical instructor this semester. She loved it! It was just the gift we were looking for to fit her personality.

About the print:

Colors? Was that an option? I just thought they were basic white with black printing. She has a red car, so this worked well for us.

The Waiting Dogs of NYC

If you are not too long, I will wait here for you all my life.
– Oscar Wilde, The Importance of Being Earnest (Act Three)

The modern dog spends a significant portion of his or her life waiting. Much of a dog's waiting time happens away from human eyes, alone in houses or apartments, waiting, patiently or not, for owners to return from wherever it is that owners go.

But in New York City, where so much of life takes place on the street, dogs also wait in public.

Lucky dogs wait together.

But most dogs wait alone.

How many little losses a dog endures each day, never knowing if a separation will be long or short.

It's not easy to wait. Waiting is, by definition, uncertain.

Are dogs on to something here?

And so reunion, never taken for granted, is always sweet and fresh, no matter how many times a day it happens.

2. January 16, 2012 at 8:53 pm loved this, Melis. I took photos of waiting dogs in Paris a few years ago. Perhaps a comparative study could be made... are French dogs more patient? I doubt it. Actually, they don't have to wait as much because they get to GO INSIDE AND SIT ON THE TABLES!

4. January 11, 2012 at 9:57 pm Gee wilikers, this piece tugged at my heart strings. I work out of my home office, so the dogs have me around most of the time, except in my busy season where I'm gone some days and working in the office on others. They howl incessantly when my wife and I return. I find that both sad and happy!

6. January 8, 2012 at 9:48 am Always enjoy your posts Melissa – but this one was especially touching. As a dog lover (like you) I have always found it difficult to have only one dog – for the very reason you mention – they hang around waiting all the time, sleeping, wondering, dreaming... so I have had, with a couple of exceptions when one passed away and it was too soon to get another – at least two dogs for the latter part of my life.

Your photographs are moving. Each one tells a story as they look at you, or away, or at the restaurant, the store, the street – wherever the dog's “person” has gone.... very special. Thanks

David Itchkawich

David Itchkawich is best known for his etchings which are intricate surrealistic scenes of worlds that are at once familiar and old fashioned but also timeless and fascinating. Here are some examples of his work through the Elaine Beckwith Gallery.

Since settling in Maine, David has been getting back to drawing. His local scenes of empty streets evoke the same haunting and nostalgic environment as his lithographs.

David exhibits every year at the Greenwich Village Art Show in New York. Below are a couple of examples of his etchings with their wonderful and haunting themes.

"Serpents in the Meeting House"

"Waiting for Godog"

Stan Ragets

Stan Ragets could almost be considered a "new age" or metaphysical artist. That is because his work is mesmerizing and mysterious, using fractiles with almost a mathematical bent.

Fractal artwork in the "fine art" sense is relatively unheard of at the current time, and Ragets' goal to eventually make it a household term. Of course, for those who enjoy Escher, Raget's work will resonate.

He says, "Art is something that I've always enjoyed; not just the creative process, but also viewing the final results. I strive to create artwork that you can 'get lost in', pieces that can be viewed over and over again, always finding something new. I want to create engaging artwork that pulls you into the image."

My computer programming background allows me to design my own custom parameters that give me a unique edge among fractal artists. I constantly strive to push the limits of current technology and am always learning as new developments take place. As technology grows, so do I as an artist."

Ray Caesar

There is something about Toronto-based artist Ray Caesar and his charming yet eerie prints. Caesar has a painterly approach, rendering imagery with soft edges and movement. The artist's digitally created dreamscapes, set in elaborately furnished Rococo-style interiors, feature haunting doll-like female figures with delicate features and porcelain complexions. The hybrid characters, part-child-part-woman, some sprouting tails, tentacles and other animal appendages, all wear elaborate costumes that reference fashions of the past and often incorporate futuristic elements as well.

Caesar works in Maya (a 3D modeling software used for digital animation effects in film and game industries), using it to create his figures as well as the virtual realms in which they exist. Through the program, he builds digital models with invisible skeletons and anatomical joints that can be bent and manipulated to assume any pose. He wraps the models in rich textures, adding hair, skin, eyelashes and fingernails. Then places them in digitally lit, impeccably detailed 3D environments built with architectural layers, windows, wallpapers, curtains and furnishings. Caesar's meticulous process incorporates elements of drawing, painting, collage and sculpture, working countless hours to achieve every remarkably intricate tableau. Further emphasizing his sculptural technique, Caesar compares his process of 2D printmaking with imagery created in 3D as being similar to the practice of capturing stills from video and film.

With full control over dressing, posing and lighting his figures as well as every element of their surroundings, Caesar's craft is an advanced extension of a childhood obsession—playing with dolls. Fantasy, escapism, human cruelty and disguise are reoccurring themes explored within his dramatic narratives. Betraying the seemingly child-like innocence of the figures is their piercing, knowing gaze—exposing inner strength in contrast with their fragile physical appearance. Dark details manifest from deep within the artist’s vast imagination to define simulated realities, transporting the viewer into sanctuaries created for his lost ghost-children who emerge from shadows into safe refuge, carrying macabre secrets and hidden truths.

ABOUT THE ARTIST

Ray Caesar was born in 1958 in London. At an early age, his family moved to Toronto, Canada, where he currently resides. From 1977—80 he attended Ontario College of Art, followed by 17 years from 1980—96 working in the art & photography department of the Hospital For Sick Children in Toronto, documenting disturbing cases of child abuse, surgical reconstruction, psychology, and animal research. Coupled with inspiration from surrealists Kahlo and Dali, Caesar’s experiences at the hospital continue to influence his artwork. His haunting imagery is created digitally using 3D modeling software called Maya, mastered while working in digital animation for television and film industries from 1998—2001. In 1999, Caesar received a Primetime Emmy Nomination for Outstanding Special Effects in a series.

Chris Ofili

Chris Ofili works in painting, sculpture, printmaking, and graphite drawing. Begun in 2004, while Ofili was still living in London, his most recent work, the Afro Margin series, continued after he moved to Trinidad in 2005, and was finally completed in 2007. Known primarily for his bold, large-scale paintings, these intimate drawings reveal Ofili to be a master draughtsman. In this exquisite series, Ofili employs his distinguished “afro heads,” a signature motif he began working with in the early 1990s. Here the “margin” — created by darkened “afro heads” piled vertically into columns and varying in size — suggests gothic towers and aboriginal totems.

With each work, Ofili started by consciously considering the width of the column, discovering and breaking the tension of the blank page. As the series progressed, conceptions of blackness also figured as a way to understand the margin. Moving transformed this idea, as he left a metropolitan center — London — for a place on the fringe of cultural activity — Trinidad. Formally, however, the series was not affected by the changes in the landscape. Unlike much of his other work, he tried to confine the relationship to the structure of the idea. As Cameron Shaw states in the catalogue essay, “Ultimately, the significance is in the arrangement . . . Like an automatic drawing, notebook doodle, or physical meditation, his intention was to disappear into the action, while simply maintaining awareness of its natural direction.”

Chris Ofili was born in 1968 in Manchester, England, and currently lives in Trinidad. He was the recipient of the 1998 Turner Prize, and his recent solo exhibitions include Devil’s Pie, David Zwirner, New York (2007); The Blue Rider Extended Remix, kestnergesellschaft, Hannover, Germany (2006); The Upper Room, Tate Britain, London, England (2005); Afro Muses, The Studio Museum in Harlem, New York (2005); and Within Reach, British Pavilion, 50th Venice Biennale, Venice, Italy (2003).

In October, Rizzoli will publish the first major monograph on the artist. The book encompasses Ofili’s entire oeuvre, and includes over 200 color images. The book includes a foreword by Peter Doig, an interview between the artist and Thelma Golden, and essays by others, including David Adjaye on The Upper Room, Okwui Enwezor on Within Reach, Carol Becker on The Holy Virgin Mary; and short texts by Kara Walker and Cameron Shaw.

Eric and Heather Chanschatz

Eric and Heather Chanschatz are New York City based artists who have teamed up in a novel way to create a giddy and vibrant look to their prints. The two artists Eric Chan and Heather Schatz scramble their names into a tidy corporate unit and have been a collaborative team for nearly 25 years. And their work coincides with a number of themes floating through art at present: the use of systems, especially digitally based; the overlap of the organic and the artificial, and the fine line between art and commerce. (Mr. Chan and Ms. Schatz routinely solicit corporations to donate materials for their work.) Their recent work is offered through the Saatchi Gallery website.

David Itchkawich

David Itchkawich is best known for his etchings which are intricate surrealistic scenes of worlds that are at once familiar and old fashioned but also timeless and fascinating. Here are some examples of his work through the Elaine Beckwith Gallery.

Since settling in Maine, David has been getting back to drawing. His local scenes of empty streets evoke the same haunting and nostalgic environment as his lithographs.

David exhibits every year at the Greenwich Village Art Show in New York. Below are a couple of examples of his etchings with their wonderful and haunting themes.

Work in Progress 9/22/10:

Works Illustrating Poems by Walt Whitman

Recently a friend mentioned Walt Whitman and how beautiful, insightful and timeless his work is even though he wrote more than a century ago. I had read Whitman, but the resonance his words carry for me now is far greater than in my youth. I decided to let his inspiration help me create a number of prints illustrating different poems. This is an ongoing project.

Why, who makes much of a miracle? As to me I know of nothing else but miracles. Whether I walk the streets of Manhattan, Or dare my sight over the facts of horse, Or wade with naked feet along the beach just the edge of the water, Or stand under trees in the woods, Or talk by day with any one I love, or sleep in the bed at night with any one I love, Or sit at table with any one I love, Or look at strangers opposite me riding in the car, Or watch honeybees busy around the hive of a summer house, Or feel in the fields, Or herd, or the senselessness of insects in the air, Or the wonderfulness of the sea-farers, or of the quiet and bright, Or the exquisite delicate thin curve of the new moon in spring, These with the rest, are all that I am aware of when I awake to the miracle of this world which is mine.

The Almost Gone Series

For a number of years I have been fascinated by the beauty of what is not there, what is missing, or what has been altered or destroyed. Imagine yourself in a museum. The work you have come to see is gone, the frame empty, and in its place is a small note card saying, "Object on loan to the Museo Conceptual de Madrid." I sense beauty and humor hides in that void.

A number of you quite correctly pointed out that I did not actually have a show at the J. Paul Getty Center, June 29-September 25. I even went so far as to contact the curator there, a Mr. John A. Giurini, Assistant Director, Public Affairs, to ask him about this. His pleasant reply was, he had no knowledge of any such exhibition. Here is the deal...When you are a pretty good artist and 62 years of age and the Getty or Whitney or MOMA have never shown any interest in your work, the chances of getting a show there in your lifetime are hovering close to 0 (zero). That should not stop you from pretending that you had a show(s) there!

As a bio-medical photographer, photography is my job. It is also my hobby, my excuse to go for a walk, a means for getting to know people and places, and a sort of medication, therapy for the soul. I am a generalist, applying the basics of photographic technique and composition to different disciplines: architecture, socio-documentary, events, and landscapes. The one area I do love to do, and I thrive on the pressure and excitement of it all, is wedding photography!! iPhone Diaries #250: "Images from the Ancaster Old Mill"

Scenes from a smallish, intimate wedding last night at the Ancaster Old Mill. Great, down-to-earth, beautiful couple with wonderful guests in a delightful venue on a warm fall October day. (Squash soup, shrimps, scallops, sea bass on a bed of basmati rice, greens with sugared walnuts, and the best gelato this side of College Street.)
Oct 10th.

Gasoline Alley, 9/15/11

In attempting to banter with a rustic innkeeper, Nina reveals far, far too much about her and Skeeze's sex life.

Pluggers, 9/15/11

You're a plugger if you read the obits page before the comics and sports.

Pluggers are haunted by the fear that if they were to die, neither they nor anyone else would notice.

For everyone who mentioned O. Henry/Cisco Kid/Leo Carrillo in the last thread, there’s also a strong comic strip connection. Jose Luis Salinas and Rod Reed produced a Cisco Kid newspaper strip, syndicated from 1951 to 1967:

FC — The answer is “no,” Jeffy. Get used to hearing it.

SM — What? The Amusing Spider Man does guest appearances? When did this start?

MT — “Andy can’t understand why he is penned and can’t follow his friend.” That makes two of us, Andy.

GT — “My Bobby’s opening some huge holes here, coach.” Sorry, but that sentence is never going to sound anything but weird no matter the context.

MT: Hunh. I did not know that the Princess telephone was named after a dog. JP: “In fact, as we speak, I’m in the process of achieving more than you in the breast department, too!”

MW: Somewhere, Karen Moy is chortling evilly and cackling, “And you thought that watching two people sitting in a diner endlessly rehashing this situation was boring? I’ll give you boring, suckahs! Bwahahahahaha!”

RA: Today’s strip explains why Donna A. Lewis has a nationally syndicated comic: She pays to not do it very well.

Pluggers – Read the obits before the comics, because starting your day with Funky Winkerbean is just too morbid.

MW – It is now Thursday. The plot has not advanced one iota so far this week. Four days and counting of Gina sitting in front of a laptop thinking about the search process. And for those of you who are still overwhelmed by the breakneck pacing, next week will feature the plot actually regressing, as Gina forgets how to spell Bobby Black’s name and has to call up her parents for help, then discovers that Windows is rebooting in order to install new security patches.

Rose is Rose – Don’t get your hopes up, lil kid. After they are done staring at the moon, mom and dad will likely head to the garage and spend the rest of the night blowing bubbles. Looks like another evening of eating half-mixed brownie batter over the sink for dinner, then tucking yourself into bed.

@bats :\[\(#y183\): Hee! Thank you for my second LOL (please don’t whack me with a stick, Rat!) moment of the day; the first was courtesy of Richard Thompson. Maybe Ma McQueen will just accumulate people and critters in her pen for the next week or so: Rusty, Kelly Welly, Johnny Malotte, Johnny Malotte’s wife, Johnny Malotte’s 10 children, six or seven geese waiting to be banded, an oversized squirrel, Sneaky, Doc, Cherry, Editor Bill, Mark's friend in the local office, fellow!, and a miscolored duck. Finally, Mark will look around in surprise: "Say, where did everyone go?" And then he'll go back to fishing until he gets a hankering for pancakes.

Luann: I'm reaching my limit with these awful characters. Crystal being a huge bitch has been the punchline for a week straight. It's not funny, it's shallow and pathetic. If Evans can't make me care about even one of his protagonists, I'm not sure why I read this strip.

Dear Jack Elrod:

Please desist from having your Mark Trail characters talk to dogs in full complex sentences. My beautiful wife does this with our dog, and though I love her with a passion, it's making me a little batty listening to the one-sided conversations. I don't think it's great for the dog either, as he sits with tongue lolling, straining to pick out one of the few words he understands, like "walk" or "food," from a long sentence asking him about his day and how he is feeling.

1) Dagwood doesn't care about his own home.

2) Blondie hates her husband.

Curtis: Goody! Then, all our problems will be over!

DT: "Darrrr... muh-nee!"

FW: She's doing the old guy's old material... and not better.

ReFOOB: Keep going with that, Lizzie.

Well today's crop o' comics (crop?) was certainly educational. We have a twenty-something (MW) taking week after dreary week to explain about her undying love for a 14 year old dream, followed by the requisite endless computer search... No, wake me when Bobby finally shows up so I can find out whether he turns out to be a hunk or loser.

Then we learn that pubescent girls (JP) don't look anything like they did when I was in high school. Those breasts show up only in comics and porn.

Then we learn that the joke my grandfather used to tell about reading the obits to make sure he was still alive is still hilarious.

Wake me when Bobby shows up.

Blondie: We spend a lot of time ragging on Les Moore, but is he that much more annoying than Blondie Bumstead? OK, of course he is, but Blondie really gets a free pass, probably because she's a buxom blonde. Not being blinded by buxom blondeness, I am annoyed. Sure, Blondie has a business, but mostly she shops and makes honey-do lists for her husband, over whom she exerts steely control disguised as cuteness. I don't like it. If you're going to force your husband to spend his weekend repairing the roof — and I'm not sure that Dagwood has demonstrated a facility for roof repair — show yourself as the frosty task-mistress you are. Geez, if memory serves, didn't Dagwood sacrifice a family trust-fund fortune in order to marry this woman, thus forcing him to spend his years being emotionally abused by J.C. Dithers? Give your husband a break, Blondie.

A3G: Now that we've been sufficiently bored by Lu Ann and the blondest family reunion ever, we can return to being bored by Margo and Tommie discussing something mildly entertaining without showing it.

MW: AND THE SEARCH CONTINUES! What will happen to our heroine next in the course of her exciting quest?? a POP-UP AD? a FRIEND REQUEST?? a TANTALIZING PROPOSAL from a deposed Nigerian monarch??? STAY TUNED!

The second law of thermodynamics states that a system, without an influx of energy, will eventually "run down" like a clock that has not been wound. This has clearly happened to both strips and we are watching the heat death of the universe played out in the funny pages. Eventually, as the electrons in the atoms that make up the Worthtrailiverses all recede to their lowest energy shells, light itself will stop being emitted. They will be just simple black panels, with the omnipresent Elrod bubble on the one (there is no current scientific explanation for why the Elrod bubble persists even in a zero-energy state, but all observations indicate that it would). It will actually be much easier to draw as the colorists could pretty much handle it. Let's fact it, a simple black square is just about as entertaining as either of the current storylines.

@Rocky Stoneaxe \(#61\): The tune is called “Dueling Banjos”!
Published as “Feuding Banjos,” then rearranged some for banjo and guitar. My friends Steve and Elaine were visiting us once, and we went to Circuit City and looked at CDs. I was standing and looking at Rhino’s “Appalachian Stomp” collection and Elaine asked what I had. I said it looked like a great basic bluegrass collection, and it had Foggy Mountain Breakdown, and Orange Blossom Special, and the Ballad of Freaking Jed Clampett fer Cri Yi, and Dueling Banjos... and Elaine said, “That’s my brother.” It took me a minute to catch on. Her brother played the banjo in the famous recording, getting none of the fame or credit for it. I had heard Elaine’s maiden name before, but never made the connection. So I bought the CD, and probably put another few pennies in Eric Weissberg’s pocket.

I was at a concert once where John McEuen was the opener, playing banjo (and maybe mandolin and/or guitar as well? been a while) and asked if there were any requests, which of course prompted someone to shout out “Dueling Banjos!” Since McEuen wasn’t a duo act, he of course couldn’t play the full version, but since he gets requests for it (he said), he worked up a solo version. It was four seconds long.

Mother sends Princess back with a note that says: "Andy looks hungry. Should I feed him before I send him back?" Sgt. McQueen: "That might be a good idea." Mother: "Do you know what brand of dog food he eats?" Sgt: "Use your best judgment." Mother: "How much should I feed him?" Princess, exhausted, drops dead at Sgt. McQueen's feet with the last note. MT: Andy doesn't understand your hostility towards sweet, sweet freedom.

MW: It's a little hard to see why Gina would find the ease of tracking people down to be "comforting", or at least it is when you've got a sniper's eye view of her.

Luann: Is crystal going for the Victorian spinster look? Cosplaying Mrs White from the "Clue" board game? What?

S-M: There's no solemn promise that Peter can make that he won't forget unless someone on TV reminds him about it. That's our hero all over.

SFx: Seriously, picture window guy, you need to have a surveyor come out and look at your lot.

H&J: Herb, just because you're the right height to kiss Jamaal's ass doesn't mean you have to spend so much time doing it.

Mary using Facebook, Google, and all the other millions of sites with people's personal information & gossip.... she could more efficiently meddle the HELL out of whomever she wanted, whenever she wanted. Why every child needs a pet

Posted on September 8, 2010

Summed up in one sweet video courtesy of Life with Dogs...

(via Life with Dogs)

Doesn't this just make you want to go hug your pup? I want this little girl to read me stories about happy puppies every night before I go to bed.

It's been one of those weeks... so I hope you'll understand that I didn't have time to put together your regularly scheduled Friday linkage. I'll make it up to you. I promise.

Until then, enjoy this video. Considering summer weather is here, it seemed pretty appropriate. I think it's impossible to watch it and not smile!

What are you up to this weekend?

Wow... we just finished the third K9 Kamp challenge. How did that happen? I guess time does fly when you're having fun.

This week's challenge was called Just One Doggone Minute to Win It. This challenge recognizes that sometimes life gets in the way of staying fit. However, we all have some free minutes in there, so Kampers were encouraged to find a way to make those minutes count! Read on to find out how we did... Continue reading →

This dog can swim circles around me

Today, we're going with some vintage Bella from 2007 combined with a PSA from the pup herself. (She totally wrote this song.)

Hot dog, summer in the city
Whether a Beagle, Yorkie, or a Pitty.
Why can't I just nap like a kitty?
It isn't getting any cooler in the city.

All around people being brain dead
Even though that car is hotter than a match head.

But it's not hard to be a pearl,
Be smart about the world.
Come on, come on, and see the light
A dog in a hot car's just not right.

And babe, don't you know it's a pity,
Some people just aren't all that bright
In the summer, in the city
In the country, or the city.

Stay cool, no need for that pity
Just remember this little ditty.
Sure enough, you'll be sitting pretty
Looking out for dogs in the country and the city.

I'm already filled with dread knowing that the usual hot car stories are just around the corner... as usual, I'm sure the news cycle will bring out my Hulk-ian tendencies. (As in, "Hulk smash idiots who leave their dogs in hot cars." Hulk smash a lot.)

You may remember when I shared a great post from Oh, Corbin – "You call me a Pit Bull like it's a bad thing." Using that post as inspiration, Corbin has organized a special event today – Blogville Pitty Post Day! The mission is simple – share a positive post about Pit Bulls.

The timing couldn't be better for me, actually. This weekend, I had the pleasure of spending a few hours with a fantastic Pit Bull in need of a home, and I'm delighted to introduce her to you today. Continue reading →

As usual, it's time for some Friday linkage. This week, the theme is helping out. Confused? Stick with me...

1. Your punny pet name: Corg Clooney. (You know, if George Clooney were a Corgi.)
2. Check out this post from Oh, Corbin announcing Blogville Pitty Post Day on Monday, June 4. We intend to participate – I hope you'll join in!
3. Did you know that Be the Change for Animals (one of my personal blogging inspirations) had a birthday earlier this week? Head on over and wish the team a happy birthday! (There's even a bit of personal news in there - I'll be helping out as a staff writer. I can't wait to get started!)
4. Because I'm addicted to blogging, I've also agreed to help out with the blog for City Dogs Rescue in DC. Here's my first post!
5. Is it scattered that I'm helping with two different rescues? I think it's kind of fun. I also help with the Friends of Homeless Animals (FOHA) Twitter account (which

you should totally follow), and participate in FOHA adoption events. Guess I took my own advice!

6. I'm actually attending a cool FOHA adoption event this weekend. It's called Sit, Sip & Stay, and it's at Bluemont Vineyard in Bluemont, VA. Attendees can taste wine while helping FOHA's medical fund. Pretty neat, huh?
7. I totally think that all rescues should steal this calling card idea. Thanks to Pamela from Something Wagging This Way Comes for sharing this one with me. (Warning: ear worm within. No, not that kind of ear worm. I think that link should earn me some geek cred.)
8. Speaking of helping animals, here are thirty-five that could use your help.
9. The chance to help name an otter? On a website called You Otter Know? Obviously, I'm in. I'm pulling for Sam Otterston.
10. I guess we all find our own ways to help. This little girl has taken it upon herself to help her dog learn a very important life skill.

It's not a one-way street, however. Dogs help us too. Like this dog helping his baby friend learn to crawl.

I kind of want a series featuring the adventures of this dog and baby as they grow up together. Rated TV-CAA (Cute, Awesome & Adorable).

It's time for another K9 Kamp update. Today, we're talking about the second challenge, which was named (drum roll, please)... Play with Your Balls.

(In case you're not as amused as I am – which would make me question our friendship – perhaps the fact that I received an email beginning with “How'd you all do playing with your balls?” yesterday will do the trick. Best email ever.)

Anyway, as you know, Bella and I have been battling against various health issues during this year's K9 Kamp. (We're still on the DL, but we're on the mend.) This week, we also had an additional challenge – the fact that Bella will not play with balls. I guess she doesn't get the joke.

Read on to find out how we did... Continue reading →

And she's making a stairway to Bella.
When you get there you know, that the stairs will be closed.
With a treat you can get to the next floor.
Ooh, you must pay to use the stairway to Bella.

I seriously can't help myself. The husband sent me this photo and it was just begging for a Led Zeppelin parody, don't you think?

Now, it's your turn. How would you caption this Bella?

I live in an Angry Birds game

Posted on May 28, 2012

We moved into this house in the winter of 2009. This marks the third spring we've spent here. The past two years were fairly uneventful. However, here in 2012, things have taken a puzzling turn. Before I get too far into it, I should warn you that this post is a long one. I promise I'll try to make it worth your while...

For some reason, the neighborhood birds have decided that my house is a problem that needs to be pecked out of existence. It's like living in a live-action version of Angry Birds. The siege began in April, when this little bird decided that the shiny plate on our front door was looking at him (or her) funny.

Adorable adoptables in northern Virginia: Back in black edition

Timber from FOHA

This week, I have a special edition of my Adorable Adoptables feature for you. In the month of May, Friends of Homeless Animals (FOHA) in northern Virginia has been running a “Back in Black” promotion to showcase black cats and dogs looking for a home. The promotion is part of the Best Friends Animal Society’s Back in Black 2 national adoption event.

Oreo from FOHA

We’ve talked about black pets on the blog before as part of Adopt a Less Adoptable Pet Week. My motto is “appreciate, don’t discriminate” – it’s crazy that black pets have a tougher time getting adopted, considering how awesome they are. I mean, how could anyone find the sweet faces accompanying this post anything less than fantastic?

Gulliver from FOHA

So, check out some campaign info from FOHA. Then swing by the FOHA Twitter account and Facebook page, where they’ve been sharing black pets all month! There’s even a special Black Cat Ball section on the FOHA website. It’s a pretty great campaign, and there are lots of cute pets up for adoption, including the ones featured in this post – Timber, Oreo, and Gulliver. Finally, don't forget to spread the word about these sometimes overlooked (and amazingly awesome) adoptables!

Cat's all, folks...

Before we get into today's links, I have some fun news to share. I recently learned that this blog was nominated for eCollegeFinder's Top Pet Blogs Award. The winners were announced this week, and we made the list of the Top 107 Pet Blogs! (I don't know why it's 107, but I kind of dig it.) Pretty cool, huh? Even cooler, some of our blogging friends made the list too. Check out the winners here.

Now, to the linkage. Last week, I featured some otters. This week, I'm feline like featuring some cats. (I blame this list of strange cat facts I encountered a few days ago.) Let's get to it...

1. Your punny pet name for this week: Terrence Meoward.
2. Cheetah cub overload! You're welcome.
3. I have a feeling that Kristine from Rescued Insanity will like this next one. A cat trained to hug... could the video be any cuter? (On a related note, Kristine is working on an awesome project to show the world just how awesome cats can be. Swing by to find out more and submit your own story!)
4. The cats in this video give a new meaning to the term copycat.
5. By no means am I endorsing this brand (I'm no expert on cat food) – that being said, I have to admit that this ad made me laugh. For Pete's sake, it has Chris Parnell in it. I'm not immune to the charms of Dr. Spaceman.

Finally, I give you this week's video. I need to hire this guy to do the music for my punny production company. (I've got tons of characters, after all.) Wonder if he could do the same thing with plush dogs?

I know... it's a weird video, but it just felt right. I'm a weird gal.

What are you up to this weekend? Don't forget to check out Peggy's Pet Place and Kol's Notes for this week's K9 Kamp challenge. Also, you have until Tuesday to enter the two Happy Tails Spa giveaways I announced last week, so why not do it this weekend?
