

Every room has its own melody, hiding there until it is made audible.

I choose the rooms
That I live in with care,
The windows are small
And the walls must be bare
There's only one bed
And there's only one prayer
And I listen all night
For your step on the stair.

